

Helen Henderson

A former feature-story writer and correspondent, Henderson has also written fiction as long as she could remember. The descendent of a coal-miner's daughter and an aviation flight engineer, her writing reflects the contrasts of her heritage. Her stories cross genres from science fiction and fantasy to historical westerns. In the world of fantasy and fantasy romance, she is the author of the Dragshi Chronicles, the Windmaster Novels and the Tear Stone Collectors.

Hearth and Sand

A collection of tales honoring those who served on the front lines and the loved ones left behind who preserved the home front. Set universes apart and separated by decades in time, the stories in Hearth and Sand reflect a continuity of service from the past to the present and into the world of tomorrow.

Although the events are fictional, the voices captured within these pages came from historical notes, veterans' own words, letters left by their ancestors, or contemporary events.