

Dr. Allison J. Muhammad

Allison Muhammad is an independent author in the youth fantasy genre. Writing 'The Crossover' series is the realization of her childhood imaginings. Her desire to see herself in the books that she read as a child led her to write her first novel at the age of twelve. Now, she writes for the youth who have the same longing for representation as well as humor, adventure, and magic.

Allison Muhammad is a native of Detroit, Michigan. She is married and the mother of four outstanding human beings. She earned a doctorate from Wayne State University in anthropology-archaeology. She has served her community in various capacities, including as a museum coordinator, an archivist, a teacher, and a mentor.

"The Crossover: The Trio and The Banished One" is the second installment that follows the growth of the characters fans loved so much from the first book- "The Crossover: AliNoorah and The 7th Pavilion" which is the reintroduction of the original story Allison Muhammad wrote as a twelve-year-old.

The adorable trio is back for an adventure of their own in this second installment of The Crossover Series. Salome, Halima, and Burhan's adventure begins with a worrisome distress call and Queen Quetzal's nightmares. The trio set out to find the answers and come face to face with a true villain.
