

Esther Pipkin

Author Bio

Esther grew up on a farm in Missouri, where she spent her childhood in the woods playing with Peter Pan and the Pevensies. At 15, she moved away from everything she'd known to a strange new world called Massachusetts, which started her journey with mental health. She draws from her experiences to write YA stories full of hope and home for weary souls like her. She graduated from The Author Conservatory with a certification in creative writing, and a certification in business and entrepreneurship. When she's not writing, you might find Esther baking snickerdoodles and singing showtunes or going on adventures (like visiting bookstores) with her husband.

Book Bio

Discover the next generation of storytellers

The fourth edition of Voices of the Future weaves together short stories of adventure and imagination in a memorable and heartwarming collection. Experience the next generation's creativity and vision through these brief tales from rising young creatives.

“Willow, Zillow, and Smith” is Esther Pipkin's addition to this collection—A young adult fantasy about three siblings who own a bookshop in a town where magic is illegal, and the chaos that ensues when an elf child shows up on their doorstep.

